

Sentiment snap-back

Financial market sentiment has quickly righted itself following Friday's month-end wobble. The recovery in risk appetite has brought about the expected reaction across markets with equities and commodity prices mostly higher (S&P500 +0.4%, Eurostoxx50 +0.6%, oil +1.4%), volatility indicators like the VIX index retreating a little, and the NZD/USD recovering around 40 pips from its Monday 0.7160 lows.

As we'd noted in yesterday's FX weekly, the global recovery remains on track and this should keep financial market sentiment on the straight and narrow. And so it proved to be the case with last night's economic data. The closely-watched US ISM manufacturing index didn't make fresh highs as analysts expected but nevertheless remained very strong at 60.7.

The details were upbeat with the prices paid index notably hitting a 13-year high as material shortages and supply chain disruptions made an impact. Across the Atlantic, the final read on the European manufacturing PMI was revised down slightly to 62.9, but this still marks a 24-year high.

Before anyone got too excited about the read through to inflation, the Fed was there as usual to cut it off at the pass. NY Fed President Williams and chair Powell were on the wires overnight repeating the line that the economic boom underway won't lead to unsustainably high inflation. This might have been the reason bond yields failed to participate in last night's sentiment bounce. The US 10-year yield is flat around 1.61%.

Two of the other factors that have supported the global recovery and hence market sentiment have been easing COVID restrictions and strong corporate earnings, and both were in evidence again overnight. New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut announced most COVID restrictions will end from mid-May, and Germany said people that have been vaccinated will no longer be subject to curfews or social gathering restrictions.

The corporate earnings season, meanwhile, chugs on in impressive fashion. Of the 306 S&P500 companies that have reported to date, 268 have exceeded expectations. Profit growth across the S&P500 has been 53% and across the Eurostoxx 600 it has been 75%, although base effects will be flattering both.

FX comment: Recovering risk sentiment saw the USD back under pressure across the board overnight. The softer USD allowed the NZD/USD to reclaim a 0.7200 handle. We suspect further gains are in store in the short-term if risk sentiment continues to recover.

Day ahead: The Aussie trade balance for March should be another cracker, indeed the largest on record if our CBA friends' forecast is correct. But it shouldn't be particularly market moving as investors look to this afternoon's RBA policy announcement. We don't expect any changes in the various policy measures (cash rate, 2024 forward guidance, yield curve control parameters). The RBA's Statement (released Friday) and a Thursday speech from the Deputy Gov may actually be more interesting/relevant. We expect the RBA to up its economic forecasts. There's nothing on the slate in NZ and a smattering of second-tier data will be released in the US tonight.

Author: mike.jones@asb.co.nz

ASB Economics & Research			Phone	Fax
Chief Economist	Nick Tuffley	nick.tuffley@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5659	(649) 302 0992
Senior Economist	Mark Smith	mark.smith4@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5657
Senior Economist	Mike Jones	mike.jones@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5661
Senior Economist	Jane Turner	jane.turner@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5853
Senior Economist, Wealth	Chris Tennent-Brown	chris.tennent-brown@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5915
Economist	Nat Keall	nathaniel.keall@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5720
Publication and Data Manager	Judith Pinto	judith.pinto@asb.co.nz	(649) 301 5660

<https://reports.asb.co.nz/index.html>

@ASBMarkets

ASB Economics
ASB North Wharf, 12 Jellicoe Street, Auckland

Important Disclaimer

This document is published solely for informational purposes. It has been prepared without taking account of your objectives, financial situation, or needs. Before acting on the information in this document, you should consider the appropriateness and suitability of the information, having regard to your objectives, financial situation and needs, and, if necessary seek appropriate professional or financial advice.

We believe that the information in this document is correct and any opinions, conclusions or recommendations are reasonably held or made, based on the information available at the time of its compilation, but no representation or warranty, either expressed or implied, is made or provided as to accuracy, reliability or completeness of any statement made in this document. Any opinions, conclusions or recommendations set forth in this document are subject to change without notice and may differ or be contrary to the opinions, conclusions or recommendations expressed elsewhere by ASB Bank Limited. We are under no obligation to, and do not, update or keep current the information contained in this document. Neither ASB nor any person involved in the preparation of this document accepts any liability for any loss or damage arising out of the use of all or any part of this document.

Any valuations, projections and forecasts contained in this document are based on a number of assumptions and estimates and are subject to contingencies and uncertainties. Different assumptions and estimates could result in materially different results. ASB does not represent or warrant that any of these valuations, projections or forecasts, or any of the underlying assumptions or estimates, will be met.